CCL - Quick Guide to Becoming an Affiliate

Roles and responsibilities of an agent

An Affiliate is authorised by Cambridge College London to develop the market for CCL products by promoting and selling the courses and providing support to their users.

An Affiliate is normally approved for an initial term of 2 years, providing they meet the necessary requirements. During this period CCL will take into account the Affiliate's performance in terms of sales made against targets, estimated business potential of the target market and the Affiliate's general ability to run the business to see if the contract will continue.

CCL Affiliate objectives

The objectives of a CCL affiliate should be as follows:

Primary objective:

- To increase the sale of CCL Courses year on year

Secondary objectives:

- To ensure Cambridge College London guidelines and standards are upheld at all times
- To ensure efficient operations when delivering CCL Courses.
- To provide excellent customer service
- To feedback product and market information to CCL.

CCL Affiliate role

Affiliates have to undertake a number of functions in order to successfully promote, administer and offer after sales support and services for CCL. Below, the key functions have been outlined in order to give you a brief insight into what is expected.

More information and training is available to affiliates in each of these areas once their application has been agreed.

It is the role of a CCL affiliate to:

1. Perform business functions

Affiliates are expected to actively promote the courses and report on their activities to CCL. This will include:

- Establishing and maintaining contacts with companies, government and other establishments and organizations which may be considered as a potential customer.
- Identifying and exploiting opportunities for CCL Courses
- Promoting and marketing CCL Courses.
- Undertaking regular market research and being fully aware of competitor products and services
- Regularly reporting activities to CCL.

2. Perform administrative functions

Because CCL Courses can be taken on demand, it is the agent's responsibility to manage the administration of registrations. This will include but not be limited to:

- Ordering the learners access to the online materials.
- Agreeing fees and confirming resource availability with learners.
- Ordering and Distributing end of course certificates.

3. Provide excellent customer services

As a representative of CCL, it is important that the highest standards of customer service are provided. This will include:

- Offering pre-adoption information and product demonstrations
- Offering post-adoption training and support
- Being an accessible point of contact

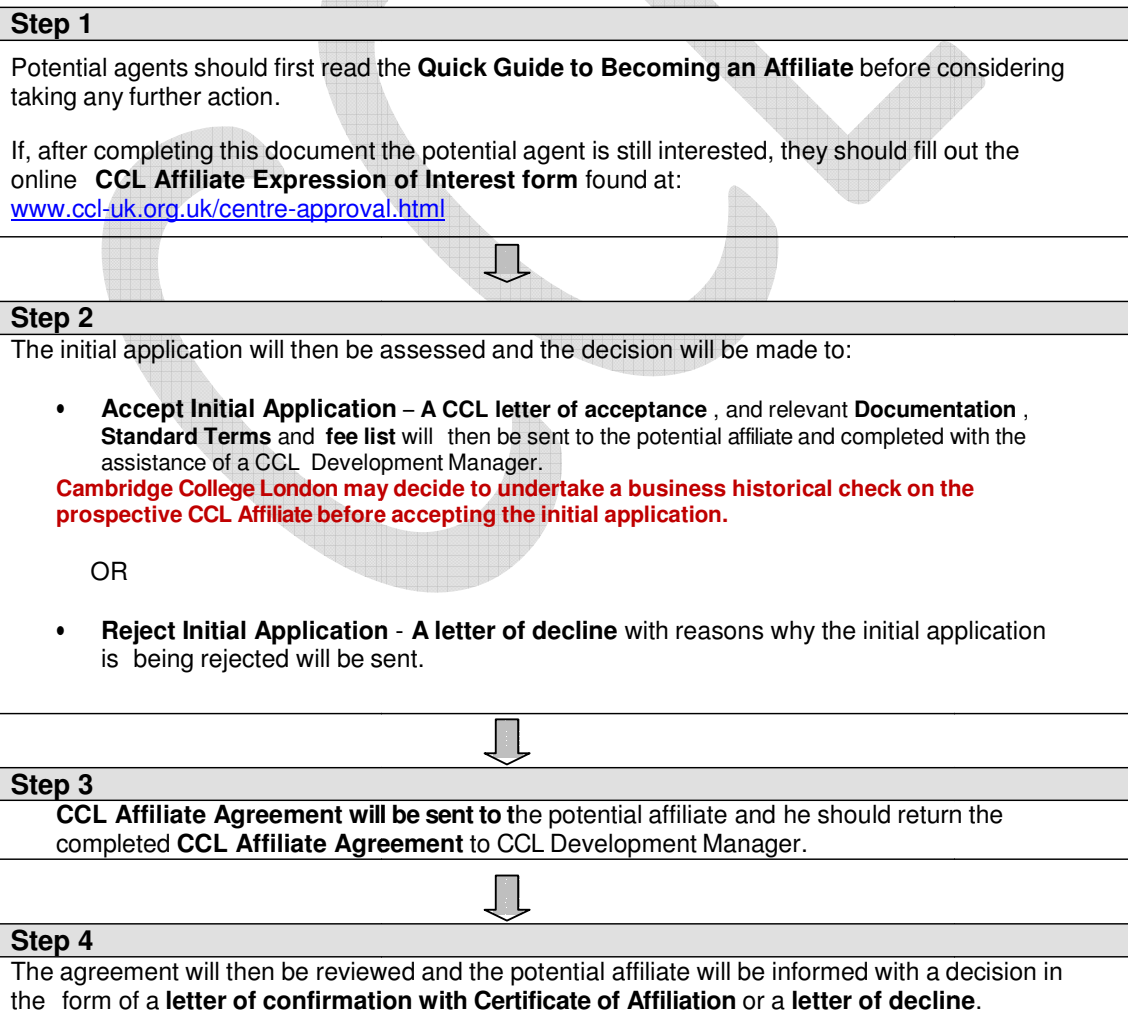

4. Offer additional consultative services

By offering additional services, you can potentially increase your CCL Courses sales and exploit further training opportunities. These may include:

- Language audits
- English language benchmarking
- Support in the management courses.
- Diagnostic advice in relation to CCL registrations

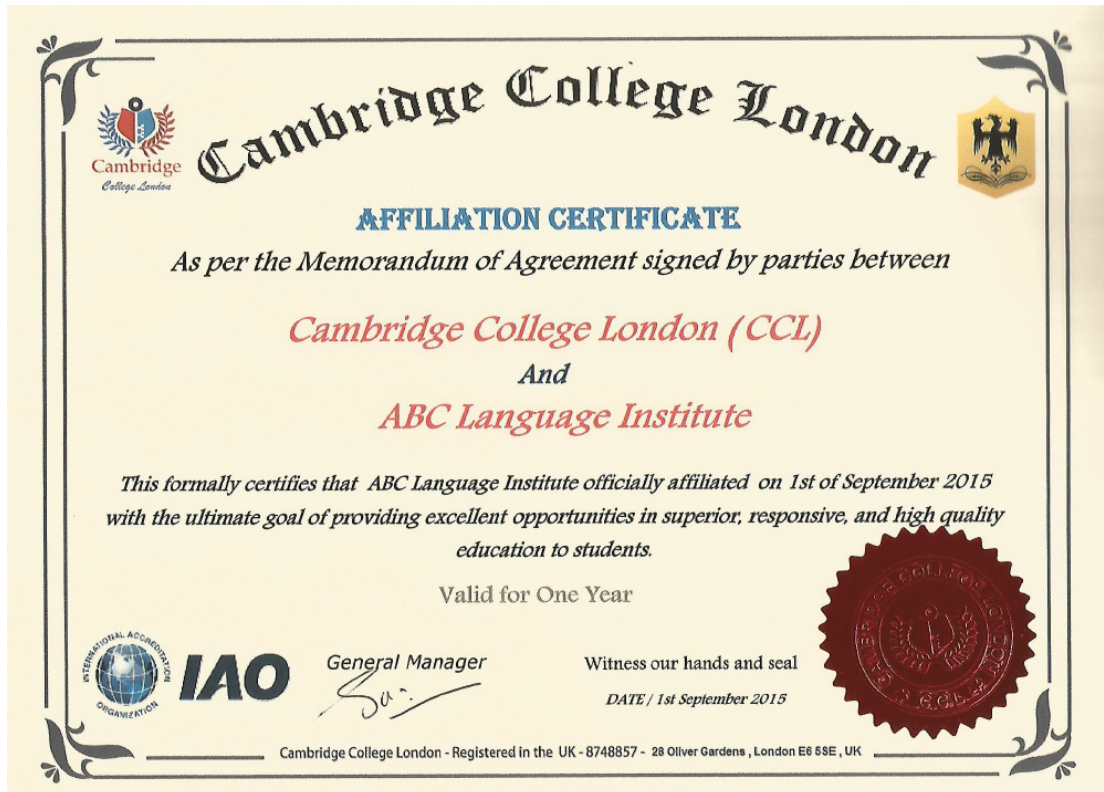

The Process of Becoming an Affiliate

The process of becoming an affiliate is straightforward, but approval does depend on the potential affiliate meeting a number of requirements. The process is described below using a flow diagram.
